Please let us know how we could improve our device guides Enter your comments here then click the 'Send' button Hi. I'm using a Galaxy S9+ from Verizon and get 2-6 spam robocalls per day from fake local numbers. I have tried a few different spam blocking apps, and none have worked out well. I'd like to just send all incoming calls from outside my contacts list to voicemail but have been unable to find anything in the different settings menus that would allow this. Thanks for any advice. 10-08-2019 09:08 AM Like 0 10-08-2019 09:14 AM Like 0 10-08-2019 02:30 PM Like 0 Welcome to Android Central! If those are spoofed local numbers, then there may not be much you can do. Spoofing is where the spam caller makes it seem like the call is coming from a certain number -- but when you call that number back, it's the actual owner of that number (who has no idea their number was being spoofed). This is a common tactic used by spam callers. They will often spoof a number that has the same area code and prefix as your number, hoping that you'll think it's a real person who lives near you. If you block these numbers, it won't help, since the spoofers will rotate through a whole lot of similar phone numbers, and all you'd be doing is blocking a legitimate phone number (that granted, probably will never call you for a real reason, but you never know). The telecom industry is supposedly working hard to figure out how to stop spoofed calls, but for now, the best thing to do is ignore calls from these kinds of numbers, and see if they leave a voicemail. 10-09-2019 01:14 AM Like 1 Open your phone dialer. Tap settings. Go to the screen I've attached and toggle on the option. Good luck. 10-09-2019 06:28 AM Like 1 Since it seems like the initial question wasn't answered I would also like to know if calls not on my contact list can be sent directly to voicemail. I do NOT want them blocked, just sent to voicemail. I have a Moto Z4. Thank you. 04-13-2021 07:02 PM Like 0 Since it seems like the initial question wasn't answered I would also like to know if calls not on my contact list can be sent directly to voicemail. The normal definition of "block" or "reject" is "send to voicemail without ringing the phone". The call type you are describing is often called "unknown" while "private" is often used to describe calls with no Caller ID info (blocked by *67). 04-14-2021 09:33 PM Like 1 Open your phone dialer. Hey from Google search, I'm trying to do the same but cannot for the life of me find the correct settings on my OnePlus6T. Help? 🙏 12-18-2021 02:34 PM Like 0 Hey from Google search, I'm trying to do the same but cannot for the life of me find the correct settings on my OnePlus6T. Help? 🙏🙏🙏🙏🙏 Most likely, the settings are in the dialer app's settings. My LG V60 has them at Dialer > 3-dot menu > call settings > call blocking > digit filter Your phone may have them at a slightly different place. 12-21-2021 02:58 AM Like 1 It's probably safe to say that most people don't put much thought into the dialer app on their phones. Open it up, punch in a number and dial away -- pretty straightforward, right? Given the relative simplicity of the app, it's kind of surprising to learn that a Dialer app for a number of years now. So just what does Google think they can improve? As it turns out, Google has been trying to do eliminate a modern annoyance that virtually everyone with a phone has had to learn to live with: automated telemarketing. Whether you call them robocalls, autodialers or spam calls, automated telemarketing calls have increased sharply in the past few years. According to the Federal Trade Commission, 375,000 complaints were lodged every month of 2017. Compare that to the 65,000 per month they received back in 2009, and its no surprise Google is trying to alleviate the problem. What Does the Google Phone App Do? Google stepped up its fight against automated telemarketing calls back in 2016. This is when the Google Phone app started warning the use of suspected robocalls by turning the screen bright red and listing the caller as "Suspected Spam Call." Unfortunately, the call still came through, and users had to decide whether to answer or not. In the updated version of the app, you won't even be notified that the call came through at all. No ringing, no bright red screen, no notification. Almost like the call didn't come through at all. Instead, Google Phone will filter any suspected robocalls straight to voicemail. Of course, you'll still be able to review all the calls that come through via your call history. Additionally, if the spam caller leaves a voicemail, it will still be recorded to your voicemail bank. How to Install the Google Phone App The Google Phone App comes as the default dialer on the Pixel, the Nexus and Android One devices. Unfortunately, at the time of this writing, the app has not been made available to the general public. That being said, it is possible to get the Google Phone App on your device. To do so, you'll need to become a beta tester of the app. Be aware that since the updated version of the Google Phone app is still in beta, there's a good chance there will be a few bugs that still need to be ironed out. Furthermore, the app is not compatible with all devices at this time. If you are not able to download the app due to your device being flagged as "not compatible," you can email the Google Phone development team for support. How to Turn on the Robocall Filter Once the Google Phone app is installed, you'll still need to manually turn on the spam filter. To do so, simply head to "Settings -> Caller ID & spam." Here you'll want to flick the toggle switch next to "Filter suspected spam calls" to the ON position. Be aware that robocalling techniques are getting more and more sophisticated. Unfortunately, this means that the Google Phone app won't necessarily catch every single telemarketing call that comes through. For instance, it has been reported that robocalls that utilize "neighborhood spoofing" usually get through. This is when the robocall originates from a number with the same area code as your own. What to Do If You Can't Install Google Phone Unfortunately, Google Phone is not available for every Android device out there. If you find that your device is not compatible with the app, don't fret. The inability to install Google Phone doesn't mean that you're destined for annoying robocalls. There are a number of apps that can stop robocalls, and many of them are free like Hiya and Mr. Number. Additionally, many of the cell phone providers in the United States offer apps specifically for phones that use their networks, so check with your carrier. Finally, if you haven't done so already, add your number to the National Do Not Call Registry. It's free and you can do it online, so there's really no excuse not to. It won't stop all of the telemarketing calls, but it helps. Furthermore, you can always file a complaint with the FCC for those robocalls you can't seem to shake. Have you installed Google Phone? How do you avoid telemarketers and robocalls? Let us know in the comments! Is this article useful?
